The Gaelic Society had met for the annual Feis Ceoli and Seanachas, which was to be celebrated with the accompaniment of Irish songs and Irish minstrelsy. Foo the first time in this country there was seen a complete set of the arms of the provinces, cities and chief towns of Ireland, specially made for the occasion by members of the art section, and presented by them to the society. When Judge George M. Van Hoesen mounted the platform to deliver the opening address as chairman of the evening he was accompanied by Edwin L. Abbett, Lawrence J. Callanan, Dennis A. Spellissy, Graham McAdan, J. W. O'Brien and Dennis Burns, all minatrious members of the organization. These are the names of the vice-chairmen: James Bogan, Thomas Costigan, John E. Develin, Joseph F. Daly, Charles A. Dana, James Fitzgerald, Parke Godwin, John W. Goff, John R. Manning, David McAdam, Graham McAdam, R. J. McCann, Patrick J. Mechan, Joseph J. O'Donohue, William O'Meagher, Joseph Pultzer, George Shea, Frederick Smyth, Charles F. Wingate, L. B. Hartford.

Judge Van Hoelsenin the course of his address said that it was remarkable how general the cultivation of the Irish language was becoming, showing that a knowledge of it meant more than a mere literary accomplishment.

"Yet," be said, "the glory of the Irish people is not altogether associated with the Irish language in my opinion. There is enough even in the English language in Byron said of Henry Grattan, "That man spoke more poetry than I ever wrote." "And as for Edmund Burke," continued the chairman, "his sayings and writings are immortal." [Applause.] Then a musical and literary programme was presented, all of the performers receiving unstined applause. Those who took part in these exercises were Frederick Harney, Miss Carrie Hun-King, Adolph Freygang, Willett Seaman, Miss Inez Kinsale, Miss Lizzie Seymour, Peter O'Ponnell, Thomas F. Kerrigan. Henry Mageo was conductor, and Will E. Taylor accompanist. When the ente

The New-York Medical Missionary Society held its second annual meeting last night in the Calvary Baptist Church. Dr. W. H. Thomson, who presided, gave an account of the scope of the work of the society. Breet preaching, he said was only sporadic and was not successful in reaching the feelings of poor people. The secretary's report stated that in six years five dispensaries have been established in New-York and one in Brooklyn. A training-school for medical missionaries to foreign countries is also one of the outgrowths of this work. The school has now twelve medical students pursuing their studies. Addresses in behalf of the saciety's work were made by the Rev. Dr. Arthur Mitchell, Dr. A. H. Burlingham, Dr. R. S. MacArthur, Dr. Edward L. Clark and others.

O. B. Gouid, the Flushing agent for the company, testified that he was at the ruins most of the time during their examination. His evidence did not have much weight as it was mostly from hearsay that he testified, his informants being Patrick Brennan and George Goumley, gardener and hostler for Dr. Reynolds. Brennan had said that the bookcases and the books had been taken from the house before the fire.

these who did sign it did so because they were led to

A WITNESS AGAINST SHARP.

GEORGE V. POWELL PUT UNDER ARREST.

MUCH MYSTERY ABOUT THE MATTER AT THE DIS-TRICT-ATTORNEY'S OFFICE.

The arrest and detention of George V. Powell as a witness in the expected trial of Jacob Sharp excited much interest yesterday among those interested in watching the progress of the bribery trials, and this interest was greatly augmented by the secrecy, for which no reason was given, maintained by every one about the Districtcould say nothing about it and Mr. Nicoli was equally reticent. Asssistant District-Attorney Davis, on whos affidavit Powell was arrested, said that he could not speak of the matter, and to mention "Powell" to of the subordinate officials was to drop a veil of non-communicativeness between the in quirer and the official. There was little in Powell's past record or in the official action taken that seemed to warrant this secretiveness.

George V. Powell was a witness at the Jachne, Mc-Quade and other Aldermanic trials. He is a mechanical engineer, having an office at No. 206 Broadway. He was engaged in obtaining consent from property-owners to the building of the road. The important part of his testi-mony was that he had seen William Moloney, the reading clerk of the "boodle" board, frequently in the summer of 1884 and especially just before the early meeting of August 30, at the office of Robinson, Scribner & Bright and of the Broadway Surface Road. He said that he saw Moloney there sometimes twice or three times a day. He remembered especially seeing him on August 29.

Assistant District-Attorney Davis made an affidavit on last Wednesday that George V. Powell was an important and material witness for the people and that there was reason to fear that he might not be at hand when wanted as a witness. The grounds of Mr. Davis's fear were that the officers deputed by the District-Attorney's office to secure the attendance of witnesses found it difficult to find Powell, and it was believed that he intended to leave the city. Mr. Davis's affidavit is indorsed, as in the case of " The People against Jacob Sharp." Judge Cowing on this affidavit granted an attachment last Wednesday, which was served on Thursday. The order of Judge Cowing required that Powell should give $5,000 bail or remain in the House of Detention for Witnesses.

One of Mr. Martine's detectives took Powell in custody on Thursday, and he has since been in the keeping of the on Thursday, and he has since been in the keeping of the District-Attorney's office. He has made daily visits to the offices of Mr. Martine and Mr. Nicoll, and does not seem to have felt his confinement keenly.

Ex-Alderman Charles B. Walte was treated in about the same way before the Jachne trial as Powell now is, but if there is the same importance attached to the testimony of the latter the reason does not appear from anything brought out at the previous trials. Mr. Powell was not severely cross-examined, but his evidence was taken as one of the links which showed the connection of Moloney as the representative of some of the corrupt Aldermen with the Broadway Surface Railroad. It was suggested by persons who are familiar with the briberty cases that rowell, has waite, may are used to a witness whose important testimony should be given on the trial of a bribe-giver.

Powell is a middle-aged man with dark whiskers. He gave his testimony at the Jachne trial with apparent readiness, but he was careful not to answer more than was asked of him. If there was any change in the later trials it was to less readiness in giving testimosy.

Failing to convince Mr. Bush of the equity of their demands they poured a long list of alleged grievances into the too willing cars of a couple of regrievances into the too-willing cars of a couple of reporters. When the last-mentioned of these complaints was brought to the attention of Mr. Bush he said that he thought the men were entitled to their wages while in transit back to this country, and authorized the announcement that he would pay them. Late yesterday a ternoon they went to his office and each received $11. All signed a receipt for the amount in which it was stated that it was to be regarded in the light of a present.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND SUED.

From The Baltimore Sun.

Joseph A. Thomas, as attorney for Thomas E. Davis, of West Virginia, filed a bill in the Circuit Court yesterday saking a decree for the saie of the real estate of the late Joseph Neal, uncle of President Cleveland, who died in Baltimore September 17, 1886. The decree is asked for the purpose of paying the debts of Mr. Neal, the personal estate act having been sufficient for that purpose. All the heirs of Mr. Neal are made defendants. They include Grover Cleveland, the President; Frances Folsom Cleveland, its wife; the Rev. William N. Cleveland, Annie S. Cleveland, Rose E. Cleveland, Ann Hastings and Eurotas P. Hastings, and Mary A. Leaveton. The legal paper siving Mr. Simpson authority for the heirs is signed by all those whom he represents. The paper was several months in its passage through the hands of those whose signatures were necessary. After going to the White House and being signed by the President and his wife, it went to Ceylon, East India, and received the signatures of Mr. and Mrs. Hastings. Others of the heirs live in Virginia, New-York and Westminster, Md. The signature of the President is less legible than those written earlier in his term. That of Mrs. Cleveland is very clear and legible. The property to be sold is estimated to be worth between $6,000 and $7,000. The estate of Mr. Neal after the payment of his debts will probably be between $4,000 and $5,000. The inheritance of the President will be not quite $200.

The big room in the Broadway and Dey-st. building was filled with about thirty people, among whom was Colonel J. C. Coolnel Reiff started the ball by offering verbal protests in large numbers against allowing a vote to be cast by persons who were directors in the leased companies, whose securities the Western Union proposed to exchange its new bonds for. The chairman declined to accept these protests, and then they were filed in documents. Meantime the inspectors of election were busying themselves in counting the votes for and against the two propositions. Colonel Reiff reserved permission from the chairman to address some questions to President Green. He asked whether the Western Union was to receive any consideration for the obligation it was to assume in acquiring the leased lines. Dr. Green replied that the measure would result in a reduction of the rates of interest now paid by the Western Union. Colonel Reiff declared that all of the interest paid by the Western Union was not at the rate of 6 per cent; the American Cable Company, for instance, was guaranteed only 5 per cent. After turther colloquy between Dr. Green and Colonel Reif, Henry Day made the point that the objector had no standing inascauch as it was proposed to deal only with Individual stock or bendholders of the leased companies. Dr. Green took occasion to remark that while Mr. Reiff as a stockholder was entitled to every iota of tegal rights, the fact that he had become a stockholder for the purpose of harassing and injuring the company should prevent his receiving any courtesy. He therefore wished the chairman to prevent the receiving of any remarks that were not pertinent.

WHAT PEOPLE THINK AND SAY. FAVORING THE BROADWAY ELEVATED ROAD. To the Editor of The Tribune.

SIR: THE TRIBUNE has always allowed both sides of a question to be heard. I therefore venture a few observations as to the proposed elevated road on

Your readers may possibly not be awate that the underground road in London was first authorized by an act passed in 1847. Then came the railway panic which stayed all progress for several years. The first serious effort to raise the money was made in 1853, and had not the Corporation of London taken the unusual step, under the advice of Mr. Pearson, their then solicitor, of subscribing a very large sum to the stock of the company, the enterprise could not have proceeded. As it was, the first portion of the road was opened in 1866, while the completion of the system took until 1883. The sthirty-six years passed from the date of the original charter until the scheme was completed. Is New-York to wait a similar length of time for the completion of the underground road? And what is to become of the population meanwhile, unless the elevated road of some other expedient is become Your readers may possibly not be aware that the cost, for the rents would pay on the investment; and the elevators employed to move passengers up and down from the street to the platforms of the stations would at the same time serve the occupants of the tower buildings. I think any one who reflects on the matter will say that to be lifted by an elevator from the level of the sidewalk to the platform of a station would be pleasanter than mounting the long stairways we now have to travel in getting up to the Stations of the elevated roads.

A road made as here suggested might have two levels; one for high speed and stations at long distances, and the other for shorter distances and less speed.

Earlier in the day Paul Krause and John Baker, fellow thieves with Greenwall, who were arrested with him hat week for robbing a house on Jersey City Heights, and who gave the evidence connecting him with the Weeks murier, were taken to Brooklyn and repeated their story to the Grand Jury, Mrs. Weeks, the widow, her mother, Mrs. Ellingham, who was visiting at the house at the time of the murder; Drs. That body was in session two hours and then brought into the Court of Sessions indictments charging Greenwell and Miller with murder in the first degree. They will be brought to trial in a few days.

Police Inspector Reilly and District Attorney Rifgway accompanied Greenwall to Brooklyn in a coach, and he was taken to Superintendent Campbell's office at Police Headquarters. He said his name was Greenwell and not Greenwall. The story of his career related to Injector Byrnes was repeated. His trade was that of a tailor and he worked whenever he could get anything to do. He and his wife, whom he married in September last, lived at No. 410 West Seventeenth-st., until she was disastisfied because he could not carn more and she left him two or three months ago. THYING TO STUFF A BALLOT-BOX. ARRESTING AN ENTIRE ELECTION BOARD IN JERSEY

CITY-THE VOTE IN VARIOUS CITIES. The entire Election Board of the Eighth Preciact, IId District, Jersey City, was arrested yesterday for stuffing the ballot-box. The Board was composed of three Democrats and one Republican. The Democrats were Patrick Golden, judge; Patrick McGuianess inspector, and Cormac T. Dolan, cierk. Owen T. McCabe, inspector, is the Republican. When the Board took a recess at 1 p. m. for cinner Dolan closed up the poll book and took it over to put it in the ballot-box. As he put the book into the box endwise a number of folded ballots were seen to drop out of it into the box. Policeman Marphy seized Dolan's hand and took the book away from him. He then arrested the entire Election Board and took them to the lst District Police Court, where they were held by Judge Stilsing in $2,400 bail each to answer two charges of coloting the election law. The district is hopelessly Democratic, in which no Republican ever runs for an office. The entire Election Board of the Eighth Precinct, Ild Democratic, in which no Republican ever runs for an office.

The count of the votes of the municipal election in Paterson was not finished until nearly 5 a.m. vesterday and, although the re-election of the Republican Mayor had been a foregone conclusion, the standing of the Board of Aldermen was in doubt until a late hour. The vote for Mayor was Beckwith, Republican, 4,957; Daggers, Democrat, 3,345; Aspell, Labor, 1,311; Tallman, Prohibition, 213. The third and fourth parties' votes form one. The Republican and Democratic parties each elected an assessor, and the Republicans elected Aldermen in six of the eight Wards, and the Democrats in two. The Board of Freeholders of Passac County will stand Republicans 10, Democrats 8. Beckwith's majority, 1,112, is the largest ever given for that office in Paterson. The Labor vote, of about 1,400, drew heavily from the Dimocrats.

Labor vote, of about 1,400, drew heavily from the Dmocrats.

In Passaic City the Republicans elected Dr. Charles M. Howe Mayor by 327 over Abel Horton, Democrat, the largest plurality ever obtained by a Republican for that office in Passaic. The Republicans elected their entire city ticket by pluralities ranging from 320 to 360, and elected the Freeholders in the Third and Fourth Wards. The new Council will be Republican. The charter election at Rahway was hotly contested, and there was much bitterness over the election of a Mayor. Mr. Daly, the Republican candidate, was opposed by the liquor element, but he is probably elected by a small majority. The Common Council will be seven Democrats and five Republicans.

William Strong was re-elected Mayor of Now-Brunswick for the fourth consecutive term by less than one hundred majority, over Frank Janeway, Republican and Prohibitionist. The Republicans gained one Alderman, C. S. Warner, and re-elected C. W. Castner collector of taxes.

FAINTING AND MOANING IN COURT.

MES. HUNTER, OF NYACK, SWOONS UNDER CROSS-

EXAMINATION.

The interest which many Nyack people have felt in the domestic affairs of the Tasman and Hunter families, who occupy houses near each other in that town, was transferred yesterday to Part III. of the Court of General Sessions, where Mrs. Sarah Hunter was placed on trial on a charge of larceny. She is of middle age and has been the mother of thirteen children. She is the wife of John H. Hunter, of the New-York Consolidated Gas Company. Mrs. Hunter's name was associated with that of T. F. Tasman, superintendent of the cemetery at Nyack, against whom his wife brought a suit for divorce. Mrs. Hunter's husband sat beside her. Her friends allege that her arrest on the present charge is a result of Mrs. Tasman's ill-will. charge of larceny. She is of middle age and has been the

Said he: "I know of nothing special, except that we had great difficulty in getting through the Mohawk Valley on account of the floods. We were several hours late in reaching New-York, but thanks to the excellent management of the railroad and its admirable system of train work we came through all right. The floods will cause considerable destruction of property as the water is very high.

When James Russell Lowell was approached by ewspaper man at the Brevoort House yesterday morning he drew himself away with impetuosity, saying in answer to inquiries: "No. sir. I will not talk with any newspaper man. I have been betrayed once by a newspaper man, and I will not put myself in the position to be betrayed again. I have nothing to say."

Private dispatches received here yesterday from San Francisco contained the report that William Kissane, about whom there has recently been so much talk in the newspapers, has fled from California to Victoria, ii. DRAWING LOTS FOR DEATH. From Notes and Queries.

At the first reference is a note signed J. S., giving an account of the drawing lots by the efficers of the English army during the American war to decide who should be surrendered to General Washington, to suffer death in retaliation for the execution of a rebel captain by a Koyalist officer.

The writer gives a list of the British officers who drew

ist officer.

The writer gives a list of the British officers who drew lots on that occasion, and among the names is given that of "Sir Charles Morgan," This Sir Charles Morgan was my father. His name, however, at that time was not Morgan, as he did not assume the name of Morgan thin 1792. He was then Captain Charles Gould, of the Coldstream Guards, and I have often heard him narrate the circumstances of the case, which are just what are here reported, and having recorded them. I will give a copy of my notes, which I made at the time.

Ontain Charles Gould, afterward Sir Charles Morgan, second baronet, was gazetted ensign in the Coldstream Guards, November 21, 1772; heutenaint and captain, March 22, 1781; captain and heutenant-colonel, May 14, 1790; and retired December 4, 1792, when he assumed the name of Morgan. He left England for America December 31, 1780, and on October 19, 1781, he was, with 5,000 of the British army, taken prisoner at Yorktown, and after eight months his family were shie to procure an exchange for him, and he returned to England. He mentioned the circumstance of the drawing lots, but, so far as I can resiliect, only mentioned the america officers of the Guards, Asgill, Ladlow and Perrin, who drew lots which should be shot by the French Americans. The lot fell on Asgill, and Captain Gould was, on his return to England, the bearer of the sad intelligence to his mother, Lady Asgill, who was very intimate with his family.

On arriving at the house of Lady Asgill he was shown to his mother, Lady Asgill, who was very infiniate which his family.

On arriving at the house of Lady Asgill he was shown into a room where Lady Asgill and another lady were seated, and when he made the sad communication both ladies swooned away and fell, as it were, litrless on the floor. The surprise and horror of the servant, who was lumediately summoned by Captain Gould, may well be imagined when, on entering the apartment, he found the two ladies apparently liteless on the floor, thinking that Captain Gould had murdered them. Assistance, however, and restoratives were quickly at hand, but the shock was necessarily very great. It fortunately happended that Lady Asgill had great influence with the Queen of France, who succeeded in preventing the sentence being carried into execution.

Fir Charles Morgan was born in the reign of George II, and died in 1847; and there is, therefore, no clear generation between the reign of George II and myself.

A MYSTERIOUS DOG.

From The Boston Post.

A MYSTERIOUS DOG.

There is a very old and respectable animal of the genus built terrier, light brindle in color, short in the legs, and rather intellectual than beautiful, who, so far as I can make out, goes down town every day and comes back in variably at the same hour. He appears to be entirely sunattended; he walks very slowly, always taking the same route, and is as regular as a letter-carrier. He is no povery-stricken dog, but well-kept and neatly collared. What his business is I haven't been able to secretain—something perhaps in the biscuit Him. At all events, he never fails to remind me of some old capitalist who creeps down fown every day through force of habit. I suppose he is just as curious as over he was to learn if scription: "Thi, baton belongs to me, X—, precentor at Notre Dame, 1280."

He immediately communicated with Ducroc, Grand Marshal at the Palace. "We must inform his Majesty of the fact," said the bewildered tradesman. "Be sure that you don't, replied Ducroc. "Cover up the baton with velvet as quickly as possible, and say nothing about it to anybody. It is absolutely necessary that the Emperor should die with the conviction that he held the scepire of Charlemagne whilst being crowned." M. Bapst holds that the numerous swords and crowns with which the name of Charlemagne is associated are no more genuine than this famous sceptre or baton. But who, we may ask, was "X!"

OBITUARY.

BISHOP ALFRED LEE. WILMINGTON, Del., April 12.—The Right Rev. Alfred Lee, D. D., S. T. D., LL. D., the first bishop of Delaware, and the Senior Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church, died to-day. Funeral services will be held in St. Andrew's Church at 2p. m. on Friday.

Bishop Lee was the son of John Lee, a sea captain, who for many years occupied the old Worcester mansion in Cambridge, Mass., near by the Longfellow homestead. He was born on September 9, 1807, at Cambridge, Mass., and at the age of twenty years he was graduated at Harvard College. He then entered upon the study of law and in 1830 he was admitted to the bar, and settled as a practising lawyer at Norwich, Conn. Three years later he came to this city and entered the General Theological Seminary as a student. He completed his course there and was ordained a deacon in 1837. In 1838 he was ordained a priest and was elected rector of the parish of Rockdale, in Delaware County, Fenn. Three years later, at the unusually early age of thirty-four, he was elected Bishop of the Diocese of Delaware, and the thirtyeighth American Bishop in succession from Samuel Seain St. Paul's enapel of Trinity parish, in this city, on Tuesday, October 12, 1841. During his Episcopal career of nearly forty-six years Bishop Lee contributed much to the literature of his church and the Christian world. He wrote a "Life of the Apostle Peter," a "Life of St. John," a "Treatise on Baptism," a "Memoir of Miss Susan Alli-bone," and "The Harbinger of Christ," all of which appeared between 1852 and 1857. He commanded high esteem as a Greek and Hebrew scholar, and wrote the ar-ticle on the Pentateuch, and others in "The Church Cycloesteem as a Greek and Hebrew scholar, and wrote the article on the Pentateuch, and others in "The Church Cyclopædia." He was also the sole representative of the Protestant Episcopal communion on the American Committee on the Revision of the New Testament Scriptures. The honorary degrees of D. D., S. T. D. and LL. D. were successively conferred upon him. On the death of the Right Rev. Benjamin Bosworth Smith, Bishop of Kentucky, on May 31, 1884, Bishop Lee became the senior member of the American Episcopal clergy, and therefore the Presiding Bishop. His successor in that digotty is the venerable Bishop Williams, of Connecticut, who was consecrated in 1851. Bishop Lee's home was at Wilmington, Delaware, and he was, throughout his entire bishopric, also restor of old St. Andrew's Church in that city. As a preacher he was simple, practical and cloquent. He was a conspicuous leader of the old Evangelical party, once adorned by the names of Griswold, White, McIlvaine and the elder Tyng, and to the end of his life he continued to be a strong and fearless Low Churchman. In the puipit, Bishop Lee invariably wore an academic gown of black silk. Most of the present churches in Delaware were consecrated by Bishop Lee during his episcopate, and his supervision of them was careful and thorough. He did not attempt, however, to force upon his clergy his own Low Church views and practices, and it is remarked that to-day probably a full majority of the clergy of the diocese are to be ranked as fligh Churchmen. Bishop Lee's wife died about ten years ago, and his general decline in health dates from that time. Two sons and a willowed daughter, Mrs. C. E. McIlvaine, survive him. One son, Alfred, is a lawyer, and the other, Benjamin, is a physician.

LIEUTENANT C. V. MORRIS.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., April 12.-Lieutenant C. V. Morris, a retired officer of the United States Navy and a grandson of Robert Morris, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, died at Sackett's Harbor yesterday. He was eighty-five years old. He entered the Navy in 1825 and was in active service during the late war. He was retired about thirteen years ago, and had since resided in the Command-ant's mansion connected with the Naval station at Sack-ett's Harbor. His funeral will occur to morrow, and he will be buried with military honors, the 12th Infantry, from the Madison Barracks, acting as escort to the re-

WILLIAM KING.

William King died yesterday at his home, No. 209 West Seventeenth-st., at the age of ninety years. He was born in Paisiey, Scotland, and came to this country when he had barely come of age. He landed at Halifax and for a short time worked on a farm, but he afterward moved to Boston, where he engaged in the manufacture of straw goods and other woven materials. He learned the trade in Scotland. His first goods were pediled by himself through the country. He retired from business in 1860 and had since lived a quiet life at his home in this city. He was for many years a member of the Third Reformed Presbyterian Church. His wife, to whom he had been married for fifty-seven years, two daughters and two sons survive him. The funeral will be at the house on Thursday. William King died yesterday at his home, No. 209

A committee consisting of Harry Watkins, Edward Aronson, Dr. Robertson and H. G. Fiske, members of the Actors' Fund, crossed the river early yesterday morning to meet the train bearing to this city the body of John T. Raymond. It was not until an hour behind the scheduled into the station. Five members of the dead actor's company were on board and received the committee. They pany were on board and received the business manager; Harry were Walter A. Lamb, the business manager; Harry Western Halen Tracy, Mrs. Plerson and Victoria Allen.

All were in tears and seemed to feel the loss of their chief as though he were a personal friend or a relative. The coffin in its outer casing of deal was placed in a hearse, and followed by the committee, was driven to the house of Mrs. Raymond, in Thirty-second-st. The dead man's face looked caim, peaceful and natural when the coffin was opened.

A. M. Palmer, who has taken charge of the funeral arrangements, said yesterday that he had received satisfactory answers from all he had asked to act as pall-bearers and the list will be as printed yesterday morning. All the other arrangements remain unchanged. Mrs. Raymond is still utterly prostrated by her loss. Walter Lamb said yesterday that Mr. Raymond's end was without suffering. He had had two injections of morphine administered and was still under the effect of the opiate when he died. Mr. Lamb, who was watching by his bedside, says he merely gasped as if for breath and then his pulse ceased beating. The company will, of course, disband immediately.

JURYMEN IN "THE GILDED AGE."

From The New-York Graphic (1875).

"There have been several amusing incidents connected with the piece," said Coton: I Seliers, laughing; "enough perhaps to recompense for the far from cheerful atmosphere which surrounded its early days. One night in Troy twelve students volunteered to act as the jury, and I had them put in two private boxes (not jury boxes—stage boxes) to wait until the last act. The courage of one of the number oozed away with the progress of the piece, and when the time came we had to go on with eleven jurors. But we got a verdict. Another time the Mayor and some of the Council of the city where we were playing—I believe there was a judge among them, too—volunteered to act as the jury. 'Don't give us away, Raymond,' they begged. But the audience 'gave them away' with three rounds of applicates in recognition, while to add to the tumuit the platform on which their chairs were placed gave way, and down came the honorable body, who there and then made their first disappearance on any stage. Again, one night the foreman of the jury rendered the verdict, 'Not guilty,' whereupon an excited larro shonder 'guilty' at the top of his voice. The stage manager went precipitately to see why this juror disagreed so very loudly. 'What did you do that for, sir' he cried. 'Coz, 'said the youth,' I believe she was guilty anyway.' The boy had the true apirit—he sank his identity even in such a minor part as a juror. But such realistic acting didn't pay."

A MATCH FOR "SELLERS."

From The Sector Fost.

The death of John T. Raymond recalls to me the first occasion on which I met him. It was in company with that most gental of friends and most inimitals of actors in his special part, the late E. A. Sothern. Raymond was then looking about for a play to succeed the "Gilded Age," and as he said plaintively, "I wish I could find a mate for Sellers," Sothern said instantly, "I have it—Buyers."
